When her Maine state trooper husband was killed by a driver who lost control, Kate Braestrup decided to pursue the career he had planned for his retirement. She became an ordained Unitarian Universalist minister. Following her ordination, she was hired as the first chaplain for the Maine Game Warden Service. Much of this engrossing memoir is about her work as a chaplain and how she serves---waiting with the parents of a lost child or saying a prayer over the drowned body of a snowmobiler or canoer, but it is really the warm and loving spirit which she offers to all those who need her; her wonderful children, the wardens, and those in distress who are in her care, that makes this such an unforgettable read.

The Fogg lecture series is a long-standing series named for a prominent Unitarian woman Helen Fogg, who received many awards for her humanitarian work for the Unitarian Service Committee.
